MESSAGE FROM THE DIRECTOR

This year our theme is "Where Our Stories Live." In a world where we sometimes feel our voices are being silenced, film is one of the many mediums through which we can express ourselves. For six days in San Luis Obispo, our stories not only live but thrive on the big screen. We are excited to once again showcase the incredible visions of independent filmmakers who are eager to share a little bit of themselves with you.

We will continue to champion storytelling both at the festival and year-round at the SLO Film Center. Movies are here to stay, and our stories will continue to leave a lasting legacy of resilience, hope, and determination.

THREE FILMS IN SEARCH OF THE SACRED

"FROM WHAT REALM OF LIGHT WERE WE SHADOWS WHO DARKEN THE EARTH SPAWNED?"

— Henry Miller, Big Sur and the Oranges of Hieronymus Bosch

The life of the spirit rarely begins with certainty; it begins with questions, and from those questions emerges a restless desire for truth and transcendence. This series brings together films that inspire reflection about the deeper dimensions of existence. Together, they explore humanity's enduring pursuit of the sacred, tracing a philosophical journey from doubt through constructs of belief to a broader contemplation of life itself. Each screening will be introduced by a special guest who will frame the film's themes and lead a brief discussion afterward.

CAST: Joaquin Phoenix, Philip Seymour Hoffman, Amy Adams

Set in the years following World War II, The Master centers on the relationship between a troubled veteran and the charismatic leader of an emerging religious movement.
